

CONTENTS

International Policy

Suchkov M. A. Partisan Divisions and Future of the U.S. Internal Politics.

The author argues that the USA is going through one of the deepest systemic crises in its history. The balance of power and institutional order established some decades ago are not satisfying the people's majority demands anymore, the national elites are divided and disoriented, competing powers are rising on the international stage. The article offers an insight into origins of the American crisis and provides an outlook for its further developments, evaluating prospects for interparty and intraparty confrontations. The new administration's first steps aimed at "restoring" the American global leadership are also analyzed here.

Keywords: the USA – elections – parties – the Democrats – the Republicans – internal politics – foreign policy – D. Trump – J. Biden 13

Alkhimenkov M. A. Biden Administration's Strategy Aimed at Maintaining the U.S. Global Hegemony.

The article deals with the U.S. administration's approach to the issue of preserving the American global leadership. The author analyses the Democratic party's stances on the issue of liberal hegemony as a mode of Pax Americana. Early policy statements and projects made by Biden's cabinet concerning the U.S. foreign policy strategy are also observed here. The author assesses the prospects for the White House's efforts for strengthening the international alliances headed by the USA. The article also contains an outlook for possible effects which the Democratic administration's policy may project on the American global hegemony and wider international relations.

Keywords: global hegemony – Pax Americana – U.S. foreign policy – J. Biden's administration – the U.S. Democratic Party – liberal internationalism – multilateral approach to foreign policy – containment policy 25

Todorov A. A. U.S. Foreign Policy towards the Arctic: From D. Trump's Americacentricism to J. Biden's Multilateralism.

The author strives to predict how J. Biden's election as the U.S. president would alternate the Arctic line of Washington's policy in comparison with the previous administration. The analysis is focused on three key directions: military security, multilateral international cooperation and the U.S. attitude to Russia. The conclusion is that the strategic course of the U.S. policy would not be changed greatly, which is explained by the long-term national interests in the region and the wider global context. However, the author anticipates some shifts in emphases on a number of foreign policy issues, mostly concerning the climate policy, which has recently been reestablished as one of the top national priorities of the USA.

Keywords: the Arctic – the USA – military security – international cooperation – the Arctic Council – U.S.-Russia relations – D. Trump – J. Biden..... 42

Glazova A. V. J. Biden Administration's Aims in the Middle East and Possible Means to Achieve Them.

After J. Biden's election as the U.S. president, the White House is facing the challenge to formulate a fresh strategy dealing with the Middle East. Many experts and politicians argue that the USA has no more vital interests in the aforementioned region, therefore the American military and political presence there should be reduced. The current head of the nation is bearing in mind a degree of skepticism towards the Middle East, however, his team has to react somehow to challenges and threats emanating from the region. The author doubts that the modified U.S. approach would help to improve the regional stability and to settle multiple conflicts there.

Keywords: the USA – strategic priorities in the Middle East – the White House – troops withdrawal – democratic values – challenges and threats – J. Biden – D. Trump 60

Kosarev V. A. J. Biden Administration's New Approach to Iran's Nuclear Activity.

The article makes an emphasis on some peculiarities of the U.S. policy towards the IRI dealing with its nuclear activity during the latest period of Trump's presidency. The author observes the main internal and external factors, which influence the decision-making process by the new White House occupant on the Iranian front. The focus is on the first steps made by the Biden administration concerning the fate of the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action addressing the Iranian nuclear program.

Keywords: Iran – Iran's nuclear program – Iran nuclear deal – JCPOA – Russia – the USA – China – the EU – Germany – France – the United Kingdom – the IAEA – the United Nations – the Middle East..... 80

Andreev A. V. President J. Biden's African Debut.

The Biden administration's first steps in African policy included canceling the prohibitions for citizens of various regional countries to enter the United States, which aimed at correcting the "mistakes" of the previous White House occupant. However, the current administration may exploit their predecessor's practice and projects dealing with issues of promoting the U.S. economic interests on the Black continent as well as countering the growing regional competition from China on the short-term and medium-term horizons. The recent Ethiopian case has shown that Washington is facing new regional geopolitical challenges, including the wider scale of the U.S.-China adversary.

Keywords: Africa – initiative – conflicts – China – Ethiopia – Abiy Ahmed – trade – investments – interventions – Kenya – Nigeria..... 102

Usov V. A. From "Enterprise" to "Nimitz":
the Evolution of U.S.-India Relations and New Challenges to Them.

The article analyses the process of developing the U.S. policy towards India. The author notes the key factors, which are determining the current state of bilateral ties. Various issues of cooperation between Washington and New Delhi in economic and military-political spheres as well as in realizing the Indo-Pacific concept are observed here. The author also specifies the U.S. approach aimed at strengthening its role in the Indian foreign policy strategy.

Keywords: India – the USA – rapprochement – defense and security – economic ties – trade – Indo-Pacific region..... 123

Rumyantsev E. N. Issues and Prospects for China-U.S. Relations.

The article deals with major aspects of relations between China and the USA. The author revisits the first U.S.-China summit in history, observing the origins of the American line of behavior under D. Trump as well as the Chinese leadership's stances addressing the USA. The focus is on future prospects for the bilateral cooperation since coming to power of the new American administration.

Keywords: China-U.S. relations – new approach to China – China's key interests – decoupling – the CCP..... 144

Pshenichnikov I. B. U.S. Policy towards Latin America under the Presidency of J. Biden.

The article analyses the Biden administration's first steps dealing with Latin American issues and provides an outlook for further developments of the U.S. regional policy. The focus is on future prospects for the U.S. relations with Cuba, Venezuela, and Nicaragua, considering expectable Washington's actions to address Latin America's "Turn to the Left". The author also observes J. Biden's efforts to modify the U.S. immigration law.

Keywords: the USA – Latin America – Cuba – Venezuela – Nicaragua – immigration..... 160

Mikhailov S. A. American Think Tanks' Role in Shaping the U.S. Policy towards Ukraine.

The article observes developments in American experts' analytical approaches to the U.S. policy towards Ukrainian affairs, which have happened since D. Trump's arrival to the White House. The main stages of those developments are studied in close affinity between them and the U.S. diplomacy's practical steps dealing with Ukraine and the conflict in Donbass. The author comes to conclusion that the American think tanks play an important role in formation of the U.S. official course towards the Post-Soviet space. Inside those institutions various aspects of a future political line are being probated. They also serve as a pulpit where persons aspiring to diplomatic positions can express their policy stances. Finally, the aforementioned research institutions may serve, under some circumstances, as a supplementary tool for the U.S. officials' activities on the Ukrainian front.

Keywords: the U.S. foreign policy – J. Biden's administration – the Ukrainian crisis – the conflict in Donbass – NATO expansion – Russia-U.S. relations – Minsk agreements..... 179

Defense and Security

Prokopenkova I. O. Transformation of the U.S. Space Policy in the XXIth Century: Provisional Results and Challenges for the J. Biden Administration.

The article analyses the evolution of conceptual setting and practical approach to the U.S. space policy from the middle of the 2000-ies until the present time. Various economic, technological, and foreign policy factors of the aforementioned evolution are observed here. The author comes to conclusion that the American space policy is notable for its consistency and stability of its fundamental ways of development, which are determined by the rising significance of space exploration for the national economy and security. The focus is on appraisal of D. Trump's space policy results, its influence on international cooperation and security in the area, as well as on the country's military capacity. The author also evaluates the opportunities and risks passed upon the new Democratic administration, and its first steps dealing with space issues from the perspective of organizational and legal initiatives inherited from D. Trump.

Keywords: the U.S. space policy – commercialization of space activities – militarization of space..... 195

Lyzhin D. N. U.S. Climate Policy: Issues and Prospects for Global Leadership.

The American government's approaches to climate issues may vary considerably depending on which party controls the power. The current U.S. president J. Biden has proclaimed the climate policy as his top priority both nationally and internationally. His desire is to reclaim the American leadership in promoting that agenda worldwide, which has been undermined by D. Trump's stance. Meanwhile, Washington's actions in that area primarily serve the U.S. national interests and may sequence to challenges for other countries.

Keywords: climate policy – the USA – J. Biden – ecological security – greenhouse gases – the Paris Agreement 221

Reviews

Kravchenko I. Yu. Promised Land:
the U.S. Foreign Policy from B. Obama's Perspective.

Book review: Obama B. A Promised Land / By Barack Obama. N.Y. :
Crown Publishing Group, 2020. 901 p.

Keywords: B. Obama – the USA – the Democratic Party – foreign policy – U.S.-Russia relations 246

Surguladze V. Sh. At the Forefront of Diplomatic Struggle, Guarding the National Interests of Russia.

Book review: Churkin V.I. Lost in Translation / By Vitaly Churkin. Moscow :
Abris, 2020. 440 p.

Keywords: V. I. Churkin – international relations – diplomacy – world politics – the history of international relations during the second half of the XXth Century – the United Nations..... 251

Article submission guidelines for publishing in the "Problems of national strategy" journal 257

The opinions expressed in the published articles do not necessarily reflect the view of the Russian Institute for Strategic Studies, the journal "National Strategy Issues", or its editorial board. The editorial board can not guarantee the accuracy and veracity of any information provided by the authors.