- Cluster policy as a factor of innovation development in the national economy
By the beginning of the XXI century clusters had become the driving force of innovative development, and the role of the State in their formation and the degree of the State's participation in already formed cluster systems greatly increased. In the last decade, many states consider it imperative to develop cluster strategies and government programs geared towards stimulating clustering processes 7

International Policy

- Bedritsky A. V.* United States post-election foreign policy: continuity and new trends

- Zabrovskaia L. V.* Specific features of Sino-Japanese relations: China's pragmatism and Japan's manoeuvring
The article focuses on the non-balanced political relations and the development of economic cooperation between China and Japan. The role of the United States in exacerbating Sino-Japanese political differences is examined, and a prognosis made of possible consequences should American policy in the region change 67

New Eurasia

- Wan Shuiun, Wan Zhinsun.* Prospects of Eurasian integration project and its implications for China
Against a background of stagnating regional integration in the CIS and the global financial crisis, Vladimir Putin proposed a new integration project for Eurasia, with the aim of making it a new world "pole". The establishment of the Eurasian Economic Union is an objective requirement for the reintegration of the former Soviet Union. Despite favourable conditions, the concept remains difficult to realize due to adverse factors. The implementation of this integration strategy will have both favourable and unfavourable effects upon China as the nearest neighbor of the Eurasian Economic Union 84
- Romanov I. A.* Strategic priorities of Russian's "Far East" policy
Russia has a serious chance of reaching a new level of civilizational development by building on the Far East. The main condition for strengthening Russia's position on the Pacific coast is the qualitative standard of living there. A socio-cultural core that can boost the intensive development of the eastern territories must be developed 102

Defense and Security

- Kozin V. P.* Specific features of US EPAA implementation and Russia's response
The USA continues to implement its ambitious plan to deploy a multilayered BMD system in Europe, which will pose a threat to Russia's national security. What are the results of the first stage of this program? What measures will Moscow be forced to adopt if Washington refuses to take into account Russia's stance on the creation of a joint European BMD system based on the principle of equality and equal security? 112

Gladchenko L. V. Modern maritime piracy: an age-old problem amongst non-traditional security issues The author analyzes the phenomenon of contemporary maritime piracy, the rise of which constitutes a threat to international security on sea trade routes, particularly off the coast of Somalia, the Strait of Malacca and the Gulf of Guinea	135

Economy
Karataev S. B. Capital flight from Russia – cause or consequence of unfavourable investment climate? Insufficient investment in a nation's economy is one of the main threats to its sustained growth. An additional source of funds could be those funds diverted abroad by domestic business. Urgent measures to normalize the domestic business climate and prevent the illegal "flight of capital" are needed to attract those funds back into investment turnover	158
History
Airapetov O. R. Turkey's entry into the war: economic repercussions for Russia There is a clear gap in relation to the effect of the closure of the Black Sea straits on Russia's wartime economy in historical studies of Russia's participation in World War I. The almost simultaneous loss of the opportunity to deliver Black Sea exports and Baltic imports left Russia's leadership with the task of finding alternative routes across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The complexity and magnitude of the problems encountered quickly impacted upon virtually every branch of military production in Russia, thus fully confirming the great importance Berlin attached to Turkey's entry into the war	174
Velichko A. M. Byzantine Empresses The article reveals the status and powers of Byzantine (Roman) empresses, providing numerous historical examples illustrating their high position and their role in the fate of the Empire and the Church	190
